PROFILE

Caitlin Neily is a registered psychologist specializing in family-centered, evidence-based treatment for preschool and school-aged children diagnosed with Autism Spectrum Disorder (ASD). In her practice she primarily uses strategies based on applied behaviour analysis (ABA), including pivotal response treatment (PRT) and positive behaviour support (PBS). Caitlin worked for 10 years at the IWK Health Centre on the Autism Team. In this role, she provided provincial training to families and clinicians in the Nova Scotia Early Intensive Behaviour Intervention (EIBI) program. Caitlin also provides comprehensive psychoeducational assessments to explore learning, attention and behaviour concerns in school-aged children. She has extensive experience working with families and other professionals to best coordinate care.

Caitlin graduated in 2005 from Mount Saint Vincent University's School Psychology program. Caitlin is a level V PRT trainer, certified by Koegel Autism Consultants, Santa Barbara, California.
